DER ROSENKAVALIER "SADIE LOVE" BOTH

Hear Richard Strauss's Comic Opera.

The third week of the season of opera began at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The work offered to the large array of Monday night subscribers, together with the occasional attendants, was Richard Strauss's comic opera "Der Rosenkavalier." The audience was one of large size and brilliant appearance of large size and brilliant appearance and it seemed to enjoy the uncommonstory of the ancient vulgarian who sent a young gentleman to carry a silver rose to his fiancee and thereby lost both the rose and the lady. The performance was in the hands of the admirable interpreters who have made it vital, amusing and even touching heretofore. If there were anything to be added to what has already been said about the Metropolitan presentation of this work of Strauss it would have to be in the nature of gilding the lily—or the rose. Perhaps the most grateful duty of the professional observer of musical doings is to call attention to the devotion which the artists bring to each repetition of this work. A drame, whether spoken

There is no sagging of the spirit of the performance. Mme. Hempel as the Princess who strove to beat off the assault of middle age by taking to her heart a youthful lover and Mme. Ober as the youth who was enraptured by this flattery of his juvenility till he met a maiden better suited to the ardent desires of his soul continue to enact their parts with most delicate skill and to sing the music excellently. Mr. Goritz supplies the burly fun with much abandon. Historians and students of nationalism may speculate as to what this modern Sganarelle would have been in the hands of French dramatists, but no matter.

Mr. Bodanzky now conducts the opera and the performance benefits by the lightness of his hand. The orchestraplayed admirably last night and indeed the whole performance was most enjoyable.

MME. GRUNWALDT HEARD.

French Planist Gives Her First

Recital in New York.

Marie Grunwaldt, a French pianist who pursued her studies at the Parist Conservatory, was heard in a first recital here yesterday afternoon at the Harris Theatre. She opened her programme with the sonata opus 101 of Beethoven. This was followed by Schumann's "Papillons," a Chopin group including the F minor ballade, four etudes and the A major polomaise and in closing numbers by Liszt and Saint-Saens.

Of Mme, Grunwaldt's playing in the Beethoven sonata little of praise can be leethoven sonata little of praise can be gounded by A large audience. Shanche Yurka was Mr. Sothern's leading woman. Others in the company were Sydney Mather, William Harris, Guy Cunningham, Lowden Adams, Lark praising a constitution of the warm enthusiasm which has attended Mr. Sothern's efforts so far this season was present last night and he was welcomed by a large audience. Blanche Yurka was Mr. Sothern's leading woman. Blanche Yurka was Mr. Sothern's leading woman. Others in the company were Sydney Mather, William Harris, Guy Cunningham, Lowden Adams, Lark numbers by Liezt and Saint-Saens.

Of Mme. Grunwaldt's playing in the Beethoven sonata little of praise can be written. Nervousness may have in part accounted for the inadequacies of technic it disclosed as well for the unevenness of tempo by which it was guided. Taylor, Orlando Daly, Emily Calloway, Mrs. Helen Orr Daly and Elizabeth Valentine.

The "Papillons" were better given and so was the ballade. Momentary show-ings of good finger work were here apparent, as also some gleams of poetic feeling. The player showed much earn-estness and sincerity of purpose in her work, but its lack in force, tone coloring and a proper technical equipment was such as might permit it to be heard per-haps in the salon rather than on a concert platform.
